

Teaching
Sheryl Lain

No pre-set lesson can contain the joy seeping around the edges of Jason's couplet or Sammi's haiku that careens out of control chasing her butterfly of thought.
No test explains Luann's tears or Eric's burst of laughter as their eyes trace the lines of thought on the open page.
No grammar worksheet makes plain the why for Weldon whose eyes drift to the south-facing window seeing answers in March's bare tree limbs etched on blue sky.

Before participating in the Wyoming Writing Project, Sheryl was a closet poet, never dreaming of sharing her little snippets about her students with them. But when she did give the poems to students, they wrote her back. Tom Romano's lines of trust crisscrossed the classroom. Besides teaching, Sheryl is a national presenter and has published poems, essays and monographs. Sheryl loves kids and the teachers who teach them. She can be contacted at sheryllain@aol.com.