

JOLLE@UGA®

JOURNAL OF LANGUAGE & LITERACY EDUCATION

International Student Learns about American Chinese Food

Viviane Klen Alves Moore

If the veggie's broccoli,
then the dish will suffice.

Many options of chicken,
Mongolian beef, and rice.

Drinking options? Only sweet tea,
The combination is from here...
a unique Georgia treat.

Besides

$6,99, ALL YOU CAN EAT,
Indeed a cross-cultural hit...

When it is Chinese food, but American style.

Viviane Klen Alves Moore is a Brazilian PhD student in TESOL and World Language Education at the University of Georgia (UGA). She has a Master's degree in Romance Languages and a B.A. in Portuguese and English Languages and Literature. In 2012, she was granted a Fulbright FLTA to come to Georgia. Since then, she works with the Portuguese Flagship Program at UGA. Her research focus on the use of technology in the language classroom and her poetry focus on the life of international students living in the U.S. She can be reached at viviane@uga.edu